Women's $17.75
New Fall Suits
For $14.75

If we should adhere to the original price intended—you'd have to pay three dollars more.

The number is limited—and doubt if we'll ever be able to duplicate these again this season for even the original price.

Some of this Fall's favored models, in serges, poplins and fancy weaves—colors are navy, brown and black. Coats are silk or satin lined—every suit tailored and styled in the best way.

With us it's simply a pursuance of a regular policy—more suits coming.

So today we place a special price on these to hasten early selection, sizes 16 to 44.

BITS OF STATE NEWS

Grafton is making elaborate preparations for a Big Business Jubilee which will be held September 20.

Within ten days, according to the Parkersburg papers, work will be started on the Baltimore and Ohio's proposed $850,000 freight terminal warehouse in that town. J. J. Walsh & Son, of Baltimore, have the contract for the new structure and J. J. Walsh is already on the ground.

In a recent issue of the Huntington Advertiser printed the following: "A way back in 1813, George Hull purchased four hundred acres of land from James Renick. These two men were very close friends, both living in Greenbrier county, then in Virginia. They separated then, one going south and the other north.

"Several days ago Roy B. Cook, of the Frederick pharmacy, who is investigating family records, received an old deed, dated 1813, from Greenbrier county. It was a record of the purchase of four hundred acres of land by his great-great-grandfather from James Renick. He showed it to a friend, H. M. Harlow, who happened to be in the pharmacy at the time.

"Why that is my great-great-grandfather," exclaimed Harlow. And so it was.

"After one hundred and three years the descendants of both men were close friends, just as their great-grandfathers before them had been.

"George E. Breese, president and general manager, of the West Virginia Timber Co., has purchased a large tract of timber land from Crawford & Ashby near Orange, Va., and is now making arrangements to convert it into lumber and move it to market. A large double hand saw mill, planing mill and a tannic acid plant are now under construction near Orange, and a thirty-mile railroad is being constructed through the timber area to connect it with a main line railroad.

One of the most interesting features of the General or World conference of the Seventh-Day Adventists which was recently held at Weston was the recital by Elder Arthur G. Daniels, of Washington, D. C., of his personal experience while a passenger on the steamship Austerly, which was being pursued by the German commerce raider Emden when that vessel was sunk by the Australian cruiser Sydney, of the British navy, off Cocos islands early in the war. Elder Daniels said:

"Our route lay along a few islands called the Cocos islands, about half way from West Australia to Ceylon. The German warship Emden had stationed itself at the Cocos islands to take our vessel, the Austerly. The morning that the captain of the Emden expected the Austerly to come in sight he sent fifty men from the warship to one of the islands to breakdown the wireless plant so that the operator could not call for help while the Germans were disposing of our ship.

"When the operator saw these men coming with their axes and saws, he suspected trouble and immediately sent out a wireless for help. It happened that the British warship Sydney was scouting about 40 miles away, and picked up the call. It immediately steamed toward the islands, while in the meantime the captain of our vessel steered out of his course 40 miles to the south of the island for fear that some thing of the kind might happen. When the captain of the Emden saw the smoke of the Sydney he thought that it was he Austerly.

"When the cruiser came near enough it was signalled to halt. The Sydney plowed right on. It was commanded to halt again. The captain of the Sydney now thought that he was near enough, so he swung his vessel around, and sent a broadside of great shells into the Emden. The captain of the Emden saw he was in for it. There was nothing else to do but fight. So he cleared the decks while shot and shell were raining down upon him, and he sent out a broadside. But his guns were not strong enough to reach the Sydney, and in fact, in his excitement, he ran the bow of his boat onto a reef and was struck. The Sydney was coming on with full speed, and literally tore the Emden to pieces. The few men that were left of the Emden's crew were taken prisoners, the captain among them."

MONONGAH

Underwent Operation.
Bruce, the small nine year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Rev. C. C. Lawson, underwent an operation at his home during the week, performed by Dr. Johnson, of Fairmont and Dr. J. A. Riedy, of this town. The child is reported to be rapidly improving.

5000-TON BRIDGE SPAN WHICH COLLAPSED, KILLING WORKMEN!

Views of the Quebec Bridge over the St. Lawrence river, which collapsed in the course of construction, killing about a dozen men and injuring many. The upper view shows the central span, weighing 5,000 tons, which fell while being lifted into place between the two cantilevers shown below. The span is 1,500 feet long; the anchor arms on each side an additional 500 feet each.

and Governor Hatfield was "indicted" for numerous offenses and derelictions ranging from inciting mutiny on the high seas to filching chocolates from a golden-haired baby. The result of that absurdly ridiculous party paper on the public mind has been precisely what a few placid and present party leaders foretold it would be. It failed to be taken seriously by the public because it was founded on falsehood largely, and chiding and juvenile promises mainly. I have found that nothing has so effectually contributed to unify the Republicans in the localities I have recently traveled as that self-same document promulgated with such solemnity and high hopes by those responsible for the curious and novel instrument. It has served to make the voters of that party forget their family quarrels of last June, and to laugh with the rest of the dear public over the imprudent and audacious bunk and piffle put forth to confuse an honest electorate in a rational choice of the little shell which secrets the elusive pea.

It will doubtless be welcome news to Governor Hatfield—and we carry to him with unimpaired pleasure—to learn that, due to the strange character, formation and fulminations of that marvelously strange and curious document risen high against him for some grievance, fancied or otherwise, have had the edge of their bile taken off, and are now not so critical of him personally. We say personally advisedly, for, whatever opposition there was to him in the late primary unpleasantness was, in the main, founded on personal and not official basis. In that situation, there is an indication of Republican unity which assuredly is disconcerting to the Watson-Cornwell coalition. That they had counted on the Lilly-Robinson setto lasting till the millinium, or at least until after the November election, was a fact obvious to the intelligent. They had counted on keeping it going with methods of their own. But the plan is a plain failure right now, with the real campaign between the two parties yet to get systematically and enthusiastically started.

Governor Hatfield will not be an issue in the state campaign—not so far as the Republican voters are concerned. The opposition will try to make an issue, and will doubtless continue as they have started to raise a lot of dust around and about the personality of the governor. They did that with the late Governor Dawson, and are heedless of the misfortune which resulted. Dawson personally was an anathema to the Democracy. Dawsonism, like Hatfieldism, was painted a horrible bogey man on the political canvas. The Democrats may have been as terrified as they pretended to be, but the Republicans didn't scare any worth mentioning. The bogey man proved to be one of the best chief executives West Virginia ever had, and one can't get an argument from anybody when he asserts that William M. O. Dawson was one of the greatest men West Virginia ever produced. It is proper to leave to history the place which Governor Hatfield will be accorded, but the Republican state platform doesn't back and fill on declaring that his administration is one of the best the state has ever had. If carrying out a progressive platform crammed full of promises for "radical" legislation counts for anything in support of the case, it is won hands down for Hatfield. He put every promise over, and though some there are who found fault with his methods, he put 'em over just the same, and that was what the voters of the state plainly elected him to do.

A man in Parkersburg, and a Democrat of the safe and sane variety, punctured the tire of his party's campaign managers when he said: "It is a waste of time and energy for us to try to keep up the bitter contest of Robinson and Lilly for the governorship nomination. It can't be done by outsiders. If the fight wasn't bitter enough to hold out in factional bitterness of itself, there is nothing that we can do to prolong it, since those directly concerned are putting it behind them, apparently intent on getting together and fighting it out with us in the regular way. Our interference, to my mind, will result only in bringing about a result which we have been hopeful would be avoided; that is, the harmonization and unification of the Republican voters. No outsider ever butted into a family quarrel and got away with anything that profiteth him."

Strikingly similar was the argument of the Fairmonter, another scion of Democracy who carries his head high in the clear spaces and has no illusions: "We can't beat the Republicans by trying to make the personality of Governor Hatfield an issue. Some of our people have been misled into thinking that because Lilly made Hatfield an issue. That was well enough

In those circumstances. That was a party quarrel, a factional affair, and the trouble was a personal one between Lilly and Hatfield. To believe that Cornwell can step in and take up a family spat where Lilly left off is absurd. Lilly has come out for Robinson and has asked his supporters in the primary to do so. Only a Republican could prolong that quarrel, and there is no Republican so disposed. As an issue there is nothing in it. An issue is a vital principle and over it parties win and lose. Dr. Hatfield is only a vital personality, which expires officially in a few months. That's the end of it. The sooner my party gets down to cases and digs up some principles which mean something to the individual voter, which appeals to him seriously and to his sense of responsibility as a voter the better it will be for it."

Aside from Hatfieldism, the Democrats up till now are laying on heavily on the charge of "extravagance" and increased taxation. These are old friends as issues go in West Virginia. They have been fought over ever since the administration of Governor White. The Democrats have never won on them, from which it may be accepted as a fact that they never proved their charges.

A number of men with whom I talked predicted that Hatfieldism and the militant Doctor will soon be dropped by the Democratic managers. They will take a new tact. With the dropping will go the silly charge, of course.

that in the event of Judge Robinson's election to the governorship he would be dominated by Governor Hatfield. No responsible individual among the Democrats has made that charge upon the hustings, nor has any responsible party newspaper. Certain it is that John Cornwell has not nor will he. An Old English Handbill advertised a public warning about coffee in its earl'y days as a beverage in England. It said:

"You are not to drink it after supper unless you intend to be watchful, for it will hinder sleep for three or four hours."

That was 250 years ago. Today it is a well-known fact that sleeplessness, brought on by coffee drinking, is due to the presence of the drug, caffeine, in coffee. It is also known that coffee drinking is a common cause of various other ills.

POSTUM

was devised especially for people who should not use coffee, but who like a hot beverage with meals. It resembles mild Java coffee in its snappy taste, but contains no coffee, caffeine, nor any harmful element.

Postum is good for old and young, and can be drunk freely at any time of the day with pleasure and comfort.
